THIS WEEK

The winner of the draw was Murray Pawling.

And now if you'll pardon a personal experience which happened during the recent Christmas shopping rush at one of the larger departmental stores in the city, the following will explain. The writer's son, Jim Jr., his wife, Carol, and three children were making some last-minute purchases. Coming down the escalator the middle child, Lane, all of 5 years old, became separated from the others and appeared to have been swallowed up in the crowd. They searched the immediate area but found no sign of the missing little one. From time to time they heard announcements over the P.A. system but for no one named Lane. Finally the distraught parents sought out a security guard who suggested that they go to the

Lost and Found Department. He informed them that he thought he had seen a child there who fitted the description but not the name. The parents made their way to Lost and Found and enquired about one Lane Murray. "We have a child

Lost and Found Department. He informed them that he thought he had seen a child there who fitted the description but not the name. The parents made their way to Lost and Found and enquired about one, Lane Humphries. "We have a lad here, Ritchie Cunningham, who answers the description but not the name." The little one brought forth was indeed Lane who was contentedly chewing candy and completely unconcerned. When his father enquired how he got to the Lost and Found he answered, "When I couldn't find you I went over to a man and said 'Sir, I'm lost.' He then brought me up here where they had toys to play with and goodies to eat." "But why," asked father, "did you not give your proper name?" "Well", replied Lane "I thought for a change I'd use an alias, Ritchie Cunningham!" (Ritchie Cunningham is a character in the T.V. Series "Happy Days", starring the 35-year old youth, Fonzie. The power of T.V. on youthful minds!).

Have no harrowing experiences in 82! Cheerio.
